Old Governor Saltonstall, of Connecticut, who flourished some fifty years since, was a man of some humor, as well as perseverance in effecting the ends he desired,-Among other anecdotes told of him by the New London people, the place where he resided, is the following :-Of the various sects which have flourished for their day and then ceased to exist, was one known as the Rogersites, so called from their founder-John or Tem or some other Rogers-who settled not far from the goodly town aforesaid.

The distinguished tenet of the sect was the denial of the propriety and scripturality of the form of marriage: "It is not good for man to be alone." This they believed, and also that one wife only should " cleave to ber husband," but then this should be a matter of agreement merely, and the couple should come together and live as man and wife, dispensing with all forms of the marriage covenant. The old governor used frequently to call upon Rogers and talk the matter over with him, and endeavor to convince him of the impropriety of living with Sarah as he did. But neither John nor Sarah would give up the argu-

It was a matter of conscience with them -they were very happy together as they were-of what use then could a mere matter of form be? Suppose they would thereby escape scandal; were they not bound "to take up the cross," and live secording to the rules they professed ?-

The governor's logic was powerless. He was in the neighborhood of John one day, and meeting with him, accepted an invitation to dine with him. The conversation, as usual, turned upon the old

" Now, John," says the governor, after a long pause, "why will you not marry Sarah? Have you not taken her to be your wedded wife?" "Yes, certainly," replied John, "but

"Very well. But you love her?" " Yes." "And cherish her, as bone of your bone, and flesh of your flesh ?" "Yes, certainly I do."

"And you, Sarah, love him and obey but being violently jostled by one of them, him, and respect him, and cherish him?" 19. The marriage was first announced he upbraided them somewhat sharply, "Then," cried the governor, rising, "in
